5. [redacted] Met with Captain Maurice Rindskopf, Deputy Director, Naval Intelligence, and left with him a copy of Senator McClellan's letter to us requesting information on the Soviet bomber and submarine threat to the U.S. Fleet, and a copy of our draft reply. At our request Captain Rindskopf will make a copy available to General Carroll and will give us any comments which they might have on our draft as soon as possible. I told Captain Rindskopf that we merely wished to be sure that this draft would not create problems for the Navy and emphasized that this had not been presented to the Director for his decision as yet.
